LARGE BANK WINDOWS SHATTERED

Night Marauders Hurl Concrete Through Glass of Mokena Bank

A furor of excitement was created in Mokena Thursday morning with the discovery that two chunks of apparently freshly mixed concrete had been hurled through the glass of the door and a large window in the vestibule of the Mokena State bank.

Cashier O. A. Bartels says that the pieces of concrete are being examined for traces of finger prints. He feels this piece of vandalism was committed by either some mischievous boys or else was the malicious act of some fellows seeking a thrill.

Mr. Bartels scouts the idea that an attempt to break into the bank had been made, for if bank bandits had been here they would have operated in a different manner.

The damage done amounts to about $75.00.

If those guilty of the act would confess they would get off easier, but if they do not and are caught later, they will have to take the full penalty of the law.

Tinley Park Sales Campaign Brings In Over $20,000

Hundreds of people continue to attend the special week-end sales in Tinley Park and the main event on Saturday nights.

Last Saturday, Herbert Niemeyer, residing south of Tinley Park, was the recipient of a $10 award.

From all indications, the specials offered each week-end, have gone over in a big way with the public and sales are increasing from week to week. Thus far, thru the issuance of coupons with every 25c purchase since the advertising campaign started the forepart of August, $20,000 has been spent in Tinley Park.

From all appearances, the present week-end sales and advertising, will be carried on the year round.

There never were as many people in Tinley Park on Saturday nights, except on a holiday, as are seen here now, each week-end.

HOMER COUPLE HONORED ON GOLDEN WEDDING

Monday afternoon and evening, Sept. 9 approximately 150 relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burch and helped them celebrate their golden wedding anniversary. At 8:30 in the evening, before the open fireplace, surrounded by flowers and in their own home, the bride and groom of fifty years ago, renewed the vows, which had held them as man and wife. Rev. H. R. Jay of Lockport officiated. Miss Louise Storm sang: "Lock Lomond," "I Love You Truly" and "Annie Laurie" in her usual pleasing manner. A very impressive addition to the evening's entertainment was a poem in tribute to the loved ones written and read by Robert Burch, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Burch. The poem follows:

Fifty years ago today,
You started out in life,
A brawny, dashing Yankee,
And a bonny Scotch wife.

You traveled the road of life together,
Though at times 'twas rather rough,
You never swerved nor faltered,
You were made of proper stuff.

And now as you stand together
And look back o'er the years,
You've had a lot of happiness
And, of course, there's been some tears.

For life wouldn't be worth living,
If we had nought but grief,
We'd be a bunch of softies
I'm sure you would agree.

And now on your golden wedding
I have no gold to give—'tis true
But it's bonnie golden wishes
That I'm a-wishin' you.

Mr. and Mrs. Burch have lived in Homer township the past 50 years and have raised a family of six children, all of whom are living, namely Mrs. Ira Anderson, Mrs. Frank Milne, Mrs. Willard Rowley, Ralph, Reed and Robert Burch.

The guest list included friends from Joliet, Lockport, Chicago, Mokena, Frankfort, Marley, Lemont, Earlville and Homer.

Impressive Services Mark Mokena Church Celebration

Although murky clouds and a steady downfall of rain somewhat dampened the spirits of many on Sunday, a beautiful sight greeted their eyes as they entered the Immanuel Lutheran Church. A flower committee consisting of Mrs. Fred Hentsch, Mrs. Paul Roesner and Mrs. Otto Bartels, had given the church interior a truly festive appearance befitting the occasion of an anniversary. Gladioli, petunias, cannas and other late summer flowers, artistically arranged in baskets and vases, graced altar and chancel.

The service began at 3 o'clock. The Rev. E. T. Lams of Oak Park spoke to the assembly in the German and the Rev. W. J. Kemnitz of Riverdale in the English language. They pointed out the many reasons why a congregation privileged to celebrate its 85th anniversary should praise and give thanks to God. Both speakers emphasized the fact that the pure and unadulterated Word of God had been preserved by Him through faithful pastors during the past years and urged the members to hold fast to the doctrines as they are revealed in Holy Scriptures and taught in the church.

In her beautiful soprano, Mrs. G. Koeller Jr., added to the inspiration of the service as she sang the difficult but edifying "The Holy City" and the hymn of praise "The Lord Hath Helped Me Hitherto." Mrs. Esther Barnes accompanied these renditions on the organ.

At 5 o'clock the ladies of the congregation served a supper to some hundred guests in the newly furnished room of the basement. At 8 o'clock another inspiring service was held. The Rev. R. L. Sommer of Chicago delivered a fitting sermon in which he encouraged his audience to accept the teachings of God in truth and exhorted them to greater sincerity, fervor, devotion and zeal. Accompanied on the organ and the violin, Mrs. Koeller sang "Open the Gates of the Temple" and Mr. J. W. Golosince played Godard's "Berceuse" from Jocelyn, on the violin.

With prayer and benediction a beautiful and inspiring celebration came to a close.

ILLINOIS
BREVITIES

Mrs. Iva Jane Barnes, wife of William L. Barnes, retired general superintendent of transportation of the Burlington railroad, died at her home in La Grange. She had lived in La Grange for 33 years, where she was active in church and club work.

Annoyed by snores of fellow prisoners, Joe Garrott, held in the Rock Island city jail on a petty larceny charge, decided he preferred his own bed. Therefore he took leave through an air chute and dropped down from the jail roof. Next day he walked into court and announced he was ready for trial. He had a good night's rest, he said.

The appointment of O. F. Beyer as director of work and rehabilitation for the Illinois emergency relief commission was announced by Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the IERC. Beyer, who has been director of commodity distribution for the commission for the last two years, will succeed A. R. Lord, who resigned recently to become assistant administrator of the Illinois federal works progress administration.

Two local leaders of the Progressive Miners' union were held for questioning into the bombing of the Valer Coal company mine engine house near Benton. The explosion, which wrecked the building and caused damage of $50,000, was blamed on the factional fight between the United Mine Workers and the Progressives. The suspects are Robert Robertson and Mitchell McDonald, both of Valer. They had been living in a shack near the mine.

Allocation has been made of $218,418 for immediate improvements at Camp Grant near Rockford. Adj. Gen. Carlos E. Black was notified of that by the chief of the National Guard bureau at Washington. In doing the work employment for about a year is to be given to about 400 persons now on the relief rolls. There is to be an infirmary addition at $3,472; gasoline storage and dispensing system, $3,732; rehabilitation of sewer system, $121,462; roofing of 122 buildings, $80,598; tent floors, $8,854.

Motorized units of vigilantes patrolled rural areas of Will county in an organized drive to eradicate a gang of cattle rustlers and chicken thieves. Sheriff Michel J. Breen of Will county deputized about 20 farmers and planned to add to his vigilante force if necessary. The sheriffs of Grundy and La Salle counties were planning similar action. Stealing of cattle, hogs, and chickens has been on the increase recently, apparently, authorities said, because of increased live stock prices. John Blevens, a farmhand, near Kankakee, was slain, supposedly by the thieves, while investigating a strange truck on a farm.

The Illinois convention of the American Legion in Quincy elected James B. Murphy of Bloomington as state commander. Matthew Murphy of the Chicago Police post was elected senior vice commander. Mrs. W. G. Suthers, Chicago, was elected Illinois president of the American Legion auxiliary. Other officers are: First vice president, Mrs. Fenton Soliday, Wood River; second vice president, Mrs. A. A. Pantells, Chicago; treasurer, Mrs. W. A. Schlupp, Forest Park; historian, Mrs. George Heckenkamp, Quincy; chaplain, Mrs. Thomas Fogarty, Champaign. The Board of Trade Post band of Chicago, for the fourth straight year, won the band contest. Second place went to Peoria, while third was awarded to South Shore post, Chicago. Larry Hammon, drum major of Mel Tierney post drum corps, Park Ridge, was adjudged the premier baton twirler.

Revision of the Illinois old-age pension law by a special session of the general assembly will be required before the state can benefit from the social security legislation passed by congress. Director A. L. Bowen of the state department of public welfare, said. Bowen said that while many minor changes may have to be made in the state act to make it conform to the federal law so that the state can share in the federal funds set aside for old-age pensions, the most important has to do with the provision relating to the "length of residence" in the state. Under the Illinois act the recipient of an old-age pension must have resided in the state at least ten of the preceding years. The federal act requires that residence must have been maintained five out of the preceding nine years in any state. Illinois will be able to share in the federal appropriation for old-age pensions, which becomes effective January 1, 1936, as soon as it has in effect a state law that coincides with the various provisions of the federal law, Bowen said. It is estimated that approximately 65,000 persons will be eligible for pensions in Illinois, according to Bowen, who will supervise the administration of the pension act in Illinois.

Governor Horner received from W. W. Arnold of Robinson his resignation as a member of congress from the Twenty-third Illinois district, effective September 16. Arnold will become a member of the board of tax appeals, a position to which he has been appointed by President Roosevelt.

A verdict of suicide while temporarily despondent was returned by a coroner's jury at an inquest into the death of John A. Thames, thirty-nine years old, an attorney for the federal trade commission, who plunged to his death from a sixth floor room in the Commodore hotel, Chicago.

Japanese Children Learn About Farm Labor

JAPANESE youngsters, spending their summer vacation on farms in Shizuoka prefecture, furnish their own motive power as they haul wheat from the fields beneath a blistering sun. The children are sent to the farms annually in keeping with a movement that was inaugurated a few years ago to school the children in the rudiments of farming. These youngsters apparently are making light of their labors.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

SAMMY JAY BRINGS
LIGHTFOOT WORD

SAMMY Jay is one of those who believe in the wisdom of the old saying, "Early to bed and early to rise." Sammy needs no alarm clock to get him up early in the morning. He is awake as soon as it is light enough to see and wastes no time wishing he could sleep a little longer. His stomach wouldn't let him if he wanted to. Sammy always wakes up hungry.

"He's Coming!" Cried Sammy.

In this he is no different from all his feathered neighbors.

So the minute Sammy gets his eyes open he makes his toilet, for Sammy is very neat, and starts out to hunt for his breakfast. Long ago Sammy discovered that there is no safer time of day to visit the dooryards of those two-legged creatures called men, than very early in the morning. On this particular morning he had planned to fly over to Farmer Brown's dooryard, but at the last minute he changed his mind. Instead he flew over to the dooryard of another farm. It was so very early in the morning that Sammy didn't expect to find anybody stirring so you can guess how surprised he was when just as he came in sight of that dooryard he saw the door of the farm house open and a man step out.

Sammy stopped in the top of the nearest tree. "Now what is that man doing up as early as this?" muttered Sammy. Then he caught sight of something under the man's arm. He didn't have to look twice to know what it was. It was a gun. Yes, sir, it was a gun; a terrible gun.

"Ha!" exclaimed Sammy, and quite forgot that his stomach was empty. "Now, who can that fellow be after so early in the morning? I wonder if he is going over to the Big River after Mr. and Mrs. Quack, or if he is going to the dear Old Brier-patch to look for Peter Rabbit, or if he is going to the Old Pasture in search of Reddy Fox, or if it is Mr. and Mrs. Grouse he hopes to kill. I think I'll sit right here and watch."

So Sammy sat in the top of the tree and watched the hunter with the terrible gun. He saw him head straight for the Green Forest. "It's Mr. and Mrs. Grouse after all, I guess," thought Sammy. "If I knew just where they were I'd go over and warn them."

But Sammy didn't know just where they were and he knew that it might take him a long time to find them so he once more began to think of breakfast; and then, right then, another thought popped into his head. He thought of Lightfoot the Deer.

Sammy watched the hunter enter the Green Forest, then silently followed him. From the way the hunter moved Sammy decided that he wasn't thinking of Mr. and Mrs. Grouse. "It's Lightfoot the Deer, sure as I live!" muttered Sammy. "He ought to be warned. He certainly ought to be warned. I know right where he is. I believe I'll warn him myself."

Sammy found Lightfoot right where he had expected to. "He's coming!" cried Sammy. "A hunter with a terrible gun is coming!"

QUESTION BOX
by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I stopped to look in the window of a drug store today and I saw the window filled with red rubber gloves. I suppose you'll think I'm dumb, but I just must ask you. "What in the world are rubber gloves used for?"

Grandmother's Recipe
for Bread

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THERE in a book where it had long been spread, I found Grandmother's recipe for bread, Written by her dear hand, and placed inside

A cook-book long ago, for me, a bride, I had not tried it for a dozen years, And gazed upon it now with falling tears.

For I could see her silver head once more, Bent to a little child beside her door. I smelled the home-made bread she baked for me, And churned for Grandmother in memory.

The buttery door stood open, for no bar Kept me from Grandmother's tall cooky jar.

The curtains blew in the October air. Her bird sang, telling me the world was fair.

The carpets made of rags, the tidies' fold

Upon the Morris chair, like her, grown old.

Are memories of precious years, long sped,

Caught in recipe for making bread

Lesson for September 15

TIMOTHY

LESSON TEXT—II Timothy 1:1-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth. II Timothy 2:15.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Boy Timothy.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Missionary in the Making.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Training for Service.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Training in Home and Church.

Timothy's training would be the proper training for every child. In the measure that such training be given there would be a more abundant supply of Christian workers.

I. Timothy's Parentage (Acts 16:1). His father was a Greek and his mother a believing Jewess. On his mother's side at least, he had a godly ancestry. Usually the influence of the mother makes the son. A pious mother and a pious grandmother were back of Timothy.

II. Timothy's Training (II Tim. 1:5; 3:14,15).

A wise and faithful mother and grandmother carefully nurtured him in God's Word. Through this training, he knew the Scriptures from his childhood. The faith which came to him from his grandmother through his mother did not come through the laws of heredity, but through careful training and teaching. Grace is not received by the laws of heredity. The factors involved in his training were a godly ancestry, a home where God was feared, and a diligent study of the Scriptures.

III. Timothy's Call (Acts 16:1-3).

While on his second missionary journey in company with Silas, Paul found Timothy at Lystra near Derbe. Perhaps he had been converted on Paul's first missionary journey, but, hearing a favorable report of him by the brethren, Paul circumcised him so as not to offend the Jews because his father was a Greek. This was not contrary to the decision of the Jerusalem council. It was a case where conciliation could be made without compromise of truth.

IV. Timothy's Character.

1. Of a retiring disposition (II Tim. 1:6). He had received a gift from God at the hands of the apostles, but it needed to be stirred up; that is, fanned into a flame. Such a temperament would mature in touch with a great personality like Paul.

2. Courageous (II Tim. 2:1-8). Having been stirred up, he was freed from the spirit of fear and deliberately identified himself with Paul in his suffering and trials.

3. Faithful. He continued in the difficult field of Ephesus during many years. He was the only man of the needed fidelity to minister to the Philippians (Phil. 2:20). The secret of his faithfulness in such a position was his fidelity to the Word of God.

V. Timothy's Ministry.

1. As fellow missionary with Paul (Phil. 2:22).

2. As pastor of the church at Ephesus. Here he labored for many years, tactfully meeting the difficulties of that great church. The Christian minister must believe in the Scriptures as God's Word and be able to rightly divide them so as to meet the need of those who hear him.

VI. Paul's Farewell Message to Timothy (II Tim. 1:1-14).

1. Personal relationship (vv. 1, 2). Timothy was Paul's spiritual son, therefore a peculiar love went out to him. This strong affection was a vital factor in influencing Timothy's life.

2. Paul's deep interest in Timothy (vv. 3-5).

a. Prayer for him. While a prisoner in a lonely dungeon, he thinks of Timothy and prays for him.

b. Longed to see him. This reveals the vital reciprocal affection between Paul and Timothy, and also Paul's inner self. He was intensely human.

3. Gives Timothy Earnest Counsel (vv. 6-14).

a. To stir up the divine gift within him (vv. 6, 7). To stir up means to fan into flame. Enthusiasm of the Christian worker has a tendency to wane and, therefore, needs to be constantly stirred up.

b. Be not ashamed (vv. 8-12). He must be willing to suffer affliction for Christ's sake.

c. Hold fast the essential truths of the gospel (vv. 13, 14). This means the fundamental truths of Christianity, including the incarnation, atonement, resurrection, and coming again of Jesus Christ. These doctrines have been committed to God's servants as precious deposits. Servants of Christ are charged with the solemn obligation of guarding them as the shepherd guards his sheep or the soldier that which has been committed unto him.

Two Rules

There are two good rules which ought to be written upon every heart. Never believe anything bad about anybody, unless you positively know that it is true. Never tell even that, unless you feel that it is absolutely necessary, and that God is listening while you tell.—Van Dyke.

SYNOPSIS

To the little town of Heron River comes Anna ("Silver") Grenoble, daughter of the "Gentleman Jim," formerly of the community, known as a gambler, news of whose murder in Chicago has reached the town. Sophronia Willard, Jim Grenoble's sister, is at the depot to meet Silver. Her household consists of her husband, and stepsons, Roderick and Jason. The Willards own only half of the farm, the other half being Anna Grenoble's. On Silver's arrival Duke Melbank, shiftless youth, makes himself obnoxious. Roderick is on the eve of marriage to Corinne Meader. Silver declares her eagerness to live with her aunt, on the farm, and will not sell her portion. She meets Roddy, by chance, that night. Silver tells Sophronia ("Phronie," by request) something—but by no means all—of her relations with Gerald Lucas, gambler friend of her father. Roddy marries Corinne, and brings her home. Corinne has a maid, Paula, who seems to attract Jason. Silver again meets Gerald Lucas, who has established a gambling resort near the town. She is compelled to introduce him to Corinne Willard much against her will. Silver confides to Roddy the fact of her illicit relations with Lucas.

A rubicund young grain broker from the city came from across the room with an enormous silver cocktail shaker in his hands.

"One more little drink on the house—for the prettiest little girl in the party!" he announced.

Corinne laughed—a caressing little laugh, down in her throat, which she had learned long ago was very effective—shook her head and stood up.

"Thanks, no," she demurred. "I'm much too warm already. I think I'll stroll out for a little air."

She had not turned, even a little way, toward Gerald as she spoke, but a few minutes afterward, when she sauntered slowly among the moonlit trees above the shore, she was not surprised that he met her there. She had known that he would follow her.

They stood together for a little while, in a piquant conspiracy of silence, and looked out upon the shining lake.

"I must be very stupid," Gerald said, in a puzzled voice. "Otherwise, I should be able to figure out just how you come to be living on a farm."

Corinne laughed and felt her heart quicken. "It's very simple," she said. "I fell in love with a farmer—and married him."

"Did you?" Gerald looked at her as though in surprise.

They laughed in unison. Everything seemed delightfully absurd. Gerald picked up her hand and bent her little finger inward toward the palm. But immediately, almost absently, he let it go.

"Have a cigarette?" he suggested, and offered her his onyx and gold case.

"Thanks." He held the match for her. Corinne, seeing his shapely, well-kept fingers, thought suddenly of Roddy's hands, large and powerful and bronzed. All at once she felt uncomfortable and vaguely ashamed.

"Shall we go back in?" she suggested lightly.

"If you wish," Gerald agreed.

"I think I shall ask Harry to drive me home," she said as they mounted the steps to the porch.

"My own opinion, if I were asked for it," Gerald said casually, "is that Harry has had too much to drink to drive anyone home safely."

It was long past midnight when Silver, preparing for bed, heard a car enter the driveway. She heard a voice that was sharply familiar to her, although it was low and pleasantly modulated. She glanced from her window. In the moonlight, the chromium trimmings of Gerald Lucas' car shone unmistakably.

"This is downright spying!" Silver said to herself, and buried her face in her pillows.

But a sudden fright took possession of her. Corinne—and Gerald Lucas! Such a thing could never be. It simply could not!

Silver and Sophronia, in Roddy's car, were on their way to Maynard with two bushels of tomatoes and a basketful of yellow string beans they had gathered that day in the garden. The harvest dance was but a week away now, and there were things to be bought and cooking to be done and the old barn to be decorated for the event.

"I suppose if we get a dollar for this truck we ought to be thankful," Sophronia said. "Upon my soul, it's enough to discourage anyone—if it wasn't for the satisfaction of seeing the things grow. And with Roddy talkin' of storin' his grain it doesn't look like an easy winter for any of us."

"It's hard to understand," Silver said, "with so many people going hungry—and farmers talking of using their grain for fuel."

"It's past me," Sophronia admitted.

"I wouldn't be surprised if Roddy gave up the whole business one of these days and moved to the city. Though there wouldn't be much sense in that, either. I thought he'd feel better the other day when he got first prize for his corn at the fair. But it didn't change him any so far as I could make out."

Silver had sat and listened, her hands clasped before her, gazing straight ahead at the winding highway. There was something she wanted to say, but the words seemed too clumsy, too unutterably crude. These people had become her people—the thought forming in her mind flowed on in a radiance—the gloomy and faraway radiance of the legend of Ruth.

All at once she felt a tide of warmth move up over her throat and face.

"I wanted to say something last night—when Roddy was talking to you and Jason about things," she said. "But—I didn't know just how to put it."

"What was that?" Sophronia asked. "It's just that I feel I have a right to help—and I want to. I have a little money left—plenty to do me for a year or even more—and I don't need the rent Roddy is paying for that east section. I don't see why I—"

"Land sakes, child!" Sophronia interrupted. "Don't ever mention such a thing to Roddy. He'd take your head off. I'm glad you didn't say anything about it last night. No—he'll get along and pay his way—or he'll make a change of some kind. He already thinks you're doing far more than enough to pay your board, if it comes to that!"

Silver was silent for a long time. It was just as she had expected. Roddy's pride would never permit him to take any assistance she might have to offer him.

From Maynard, Sophronia and Silver, with the car windows up, drove home through dissolving distances of rain. "Think of gettin' only ninety cents for all our work yesterday," Phronie mused aloud, "not countin' the cost of seed and the bother of plantin'. Darn it! I could almost wish every city swell might starve to death!"

CHAPTER VII

The mow of the new barn was full of hay, so that it could not be used for the harvest dance. Consequently, the loft of the old barn below the hill, which had latterly been used for surplus storage, came into its own again. It looked as if the whole countryside had turned out, as well as many from Heron River and Maynard. An improvised orchestra—an accordion, a fiddle, a harmonica, a horn, and a snare drum—made an irresistible music that seemed to come out of an unspoiled and wistful past. There might come a time, Silver thought, when nowhere in the world could one hear this simple, wild, untutored music that quickened one's pulses and set one's feet to flying over the waxed, knotty floor. There might—but it would be a sad time. . . .

Jason stood with Silver at one end of the loft, where the orchestra was getting ready to play for another square dance.

"I think I'll ask Paula for this one," Jason said.

"If someone isn't ahead of you," Silver said. "She seems to be very popular tonight."

Jason was silent for a moment. "Have you ever noticed," he said presently, "what an awfully pretty neck and head she has?"

"Paula is a handsome girl," Silver observed. "She would make a fine model for some painter," but Jason hurried away as old Steve, acting master of ceremonies, called for the next dance.

Silver moved down to where Roddy and Corinne were standing together.

"I wonder what has happened to Gerald Lucas," Corinne said as Silver joined them. "I sent him a special invitation urging him to come, and here it's midnight—"

Silver smiled. "He may be staying away on my account, Corinne. I told him once that I didn't want him to come here. He probably took me at my word."

Corinne made no effort to conceal her amazement. "You told him that?"

"Silver may have her own reasons for not wanting him around," Roddy put in.

"I have," Silver said lightly.

"Well—as I have said before—it's no affair of mine, after all," Corinne observed pointedly. "But I do think—when I take the trouble to invite someone specially—"

"Forget it, Corrie," Roddy interrupted. "There goes the next dance."

He led her upon the floor as Phil, the eldest of the Michener boys, came for Silver.

As they moved together into the dance, neither of them noticed Duke Melbank and a companion stagger up from the top rung of the loft ladder and make their way into the crowd. Uppermost in Silver's mind was the thought that she was being received by the country people here as if she were one of them.

Old Steve called out in his high thin voice: "All join hands!"

Silver left Phil and joined the girls who moved in a gay circle past the men.

"All swing!" old Steve shouted suddenly.

In the laughter and confusion, Silver was at first too bewildered to do anything more than gasp for breath in the smothering embrace that held her. It was a moment or two before she recognized the face of the man who had whirled her into his arms. Then she saw that it was Duke Melbank. She struggled to free herself, only to be clutched closer to his swaying body.

She was aware now that he was thoroughly drunk.

"Let's get acquainted, Cutie!" Duke Melbank muttered thickly against her cheek. "I've liked you ever since I saw you that night in Chi."

"Let me go!" Silver breathed fiercely. "Aw—can't you give a guy a break?" he persisted.

Silver turned her head in a frantic effort to make some sign to Roddy, but he was at the other end of the floor.

"Let me go!" she demanded again, and struggled to break away from him. "Aw, come on," Duke burred in a cajoling voice as he swung her bodily into a dim corner. "Be a sport, kid!"

It had all happened so quickly that probably no one on the crowded floor had taken any notice of it. Silver succeeded in freeing one arm to throw all her strength into the blow she struck across his grinning face.

"You got fire, eh?" he chortled. "I like that in a girl. You and me—"

"Roddy!" Silver gasped, flinging herself about just as Roddy Willard appeared, alone.

Duke dropped Silver's wrist as though it had scorched him. "Haw-haw! Can't Silver and me have a little privacy without—"

"Get out of here, Duke," Roddy interrupted quietly. "And go out quietly or I'll have to throw you out."

With a malevolent glare at Roddy, Duke started to shamble away. "You can't get away with this, Willard," he muttered. "And you don't need to think I don't know what I'm doing."

He grinned insinuatingly at Silver and Roddy stepped quickly toward him.

Drove Home Through Dissolving Distances of Rain.

Duke drew back, and made his unsteady way down the ladder.

Luckily, Silver reflected, there had been only one or two witnesses to the unpleasant scene.

Roddy looked down at her. "Shall we dance, Silver?" he asked. "I think it would be best—considering everything."

Her eyes half closed, she nodded, and Roddy drew her into his arms.

A fierce, impersonal sort of tenderness toward her came over him as he led her into the dance. She seemed to be without substance—like smoke, or like the blue-gray mist over a meadow just before dawn. Silver did not speak. This tumult enclosed by her passive body, she thought in desperation, had begun at the very instant when Roddy—a very matter-of-fact knight, indeed—had rescued her from the loathsome attentions of Duke Melbank. Horror lest he should discover what she knew now for a certainty—that she loved him as she had never loved anyone before—ran through her veins like ice.

When after an agonizing eternity the intermission came, she stepped back from him and looked up with a dazed smile.

"I'm going to the house," she told him, her voice running headlong, plunging, she thought, into disaster. "If Phronie asks for me—tell her I have a headache—I want to be alone."

Roddy, with a troubled frown, put out his hand to take her arm, but Silver moved hurriedly away.

A few minutes later, behind the closed door of her own room, she sat down in the darkness and stared out at the crisp autumn tracery of the leaves of the great oak against the stars.

"To think—when the real thing came," she whispered dully to the square pattern of stars and leaves, "it had to be wrong too!"

The district buzzed with talk of the opening of the Emerald Bay club for the winter season. The fashionable folk who would come out from the cities for week-ends at the club would be free with their money and the tradesmen would benefit. If this fellow Lucas could only conduct his affairs in a way that would keep everything well within the limits of the law. . . .

The hunt dinner and ball celebrated the close of the big-game season in the north. Roddy attended with Corinne, whose radiance filled him with pride and a secret, shamed alarm. Silver sent her regards to Gerald, and spent the evening playing cribbage with old Roderick.

The following day, at twilight, with a pent-up feeling she could no longer endure, Silver saddled Rusty and rode into Heron River to get the evening mail. In the post office she met Freda Michener.

"We missed you last night—at the club," Freda said.

"Have a good time?" Silver asked absently.

"Hasn't Corinne told you? It was gorgeous!"

"I haven't seen Corinne yet. I think she has been sleeping in today. They didn't get home till dawn."

Freda dropped her voice to an embarrassed whisper. "Roddy Willard had better watch his step. I saw Corinne—well, she was only out walking under the trees with Gerald Lucas—but you know how people talk."

Silver laughed nervously. "Non-sense, Freda!" she protested. "Forget about it—and keep it to yourself, please. City people don't think anything of such things."

With the one letter for Roddy which Tillie Fink thrust out to her through the wicket, Silver rode slowly home, unsaddled Rusty and turned him into his stall. Then she went reluctantly to the big house to give Roddy his letter. She had contrived to see as little as possible of Roddy since the night of the harvest dance. Now this wretched fear for Corinne would simply double her discomfort in the presence of Roddy and his wife.

Corinne called to her from the living room in a voice that seemed to Silver to be portentously vivified and gay.

"You missed a swell time last night, my dear!" Corinne cried as Silver stepped into the room.

Roddy looked up a bit wearily. He lifted his hand toward her in greeting.

"It must have been fun," Silver said hurriedly. "Here's a letter for you, Roddy."

He got up and took the letter. Corinne at once sprang up and stood at his shoulder, her eyes upon the unfolded sheet.

Then she uttered a squeal of joy. "Roddy! A position at the University farm! Darling!"

Roddy glanced down again, not without pleasure, at the letter. His patient experimenting with yellow corn . . . his working under difficulties . . . his devotion to an idea . . . the position would be open by January first. . . .

Silver, staring at him, felt her brain spin and turn over and then come to a cold, clear pause. "Have you been offered a position, Roddy?" she asked in a voice as calm as she could make it.

"At the University, Silver!" Corinne burst out. "Oh, it's—I can scarcely believe it!"

"Don't get yourself all worked up, Corrie," Roddy begged. "Old Neal Anthony has been trying to lure me into something like this ever since I left college. It seems hard to convince him that I'm a farmer, not a white-collar man."

"What do you mean?" Corinne pouted, then gave him a winsome smile. "Don't tease me, darling. I'm so happy I could cry."

"You wouldn't want me to take on a tenderfoot's job with a—"

"Roddy!" Corinne interrupted. "You're simply cruel to talk like that, even in fun."

"I'm not trying to be funny," he said. "I thought you knew me better than that."

Corinne looked suddenly dumfounded. "You don't mean—you aren't going to turn it down, are you?" she gasped. "I've turned Neal Anthony down before," Roddy replied quietly. "I see no reason why I should change my mind now."

Silver felt that she had frozen into her chair. It was only with a supreme effort that she got up and fled from the room, Corinne's voice following her, piercing and furious with outrage at Roddy.

For two hours after supper, Roddy sat with his father and Sophronia and Jason in the kitchen of the stone house while they discussed Anthony's offer. Jason was quick to sympathize with Roddy's contempt for a job where he would become a mere hireling at the beck and call of others, though he was forced to recognize the narrowly calculated means by which the family would have to manage throughout the winter.

"I could take the place over, Rod," he said slowly. "With just the rest of us here—we wouldn't need so much. Perhaps we ought to sell those six heifers, instead of—"

"Of course," Roddy interrupted patiently. "I know you could swing it, Jase. But the point is that I want to be in on it."

"After we marry, my boy," Old Roderick remarked thoughtfully, "we travel in pairs. You must remember that."

"I've thought rings around that, dad," Roddy said tersely. "But I always come around to the fact that down in Iowa they are having farmers' strikes and picketings and bloodshed. I'm one of those guys, dad. My wife has to be one of those guys too. If we were in that territory we'd be in the mess—we wouldn't be protected by a fancy job."

It was Sophronia who came out boldly with her opinion that Corinne would never take to life on the farm.

"I feel sorry for the poor girl," Phronie declared vehemently. "She married you because you were good-looking and smart, Roddy, and she liked you. But she saw you had something more to you than just slavin' day and night for a living! It's up to you, Roddy—"

"Yes," Roddy said crisply. "It's up to me. I'm d—d glad it is. Corinne will know that she married me. Not an idea she had about me."

"Well, that may be," his father reminded him. "But one bad year is enough to put a blight on a marriage, my boy, as well as on a crop."

"There's always another year!" Roddy retorted with a short laugh.

PARK ALTITUDES MEAN NOTHING TO PICCARD FAMILY

The altitudes of Yellowstone park mountains weren't nearly as impressive to Dr. and Mrs. Jean Piccard, stratosphere balloonists, as were the geysers, the falls, and the bears. The two intrepid flyers who reached a height of more than 10 miles in their flight a year ago considered the 10,000-foot elevations in the park really "down to earth" levels.

Maintaining that stratosphere explorations within the next decade or two will produce some of the major scientific discoveries, Dr. Piccard expressed keen disappointment in the failure of the army flight from Rapid City, South Dakota. On his way to Yellowstone park, they visited the site of the latest stratosphere exploration attempt, but neither Dr. Piccard nor his wife would offer any suggestion as to the possible cause for the failure of the test flight.

Ardent outdoor enthusiasts, the entire Piccard family of three children and the parents made the park trip a real outing. Clad in shirt, shorts and sneakers, the quintet headed immediately for remote sections of the park, choosing to camp on lake shores and along streams in the park.

Dr. Piccard is now affiliated with the Franklin Institute in an advisory capacity as a chemist. He was formerly a professor of chemistry at Chicago, Basle and Lausanne universities. The family plans to leave the park within about two weeks, heading for San Francisco, where Dr. Piccard is going to do research work for a pharmaceutical institute.

People's Column

EDITOR NEWS-BULLETIN:

In naming these presidential possibilities I will take that of Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa. While there has not been much mention of him in the papers, he is the candidate that I have as the choice of the 1936 Republican convention. A world war veteran, Governor of his state two terms, elected to the U. S. Senate in 1930. Never showed any great ability until the 1932 Republican convention, then as temporary chairman, he had as hard a job as any man has ever asked to perform; his party had been in power for twelve years, the fast four having plunged the country into a panic. The then Republican president had done nothing to help the people, the bank wreckers had closed the banks, some of the banks were ruined by dishonest bankers, with no attempt being made by the administration to help the situation; but for all of that he was able to create a good amount of enthusiasm for Herbert Hoover, the president.

As Senator, his votes were not all against Roosevelt. I don't want to take the space to go into detail of those votes, enough to say that he voted "no" on the Vinson bill and "yea" on the Patman bill, the one Roosevelt vetoed. Of all the western and mid-west candidates he is probably the most safe of any.

The next and most spoken of candidate and the man of longest service is Senator Wm. E. Borah of Idaho. One of the things that would disqualify him in my views is his changeable mind, never the same and never knowing where to place him. He brings to mind the story of Grisham in 1890. When asking who was running for president on the Republican ticket, he was told McKinley, he said: "Oh faith, he's from Druary, I know him well, I'll vote for him." Who is the Democrats running he inquired and they told him Wm. Bryan, and he said: "Oh, he's from Dublin; I know him from a kid, he's a better man yet, I'll vote for him."

Senator Borah has been a thorn in the side of every president since he has been in the Senate, sometimes for organized labor and sometimes against; never having voted for a financial bill that would help the entire country. His policy has been "swat the rich." I am not positive but I think he voted against the Bonus.

Waiting for the presidential wasp, hornet or bee whichever happens along to sting him first. He is just now putting in his time swatting President Roosevelt. After the convention refuses to nominate Borah,

About thirty-five guests gathered at the Good Time Cottage, southeast of Tinley Park Saturday evening, September 7, to celebrate the sixtieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Plyme of Beverly Hills. The members of the H. B. F. club of Tinley Park sponsored a very unique program which captivated all present. A mock wedding, staged by the club members, provoked much merriment, as did also the costumes of those taking part, some attired in costumes, dating back to the 80's and some in the old time Bowery styles. The songs as rendered by the H. B. F. club members were a scream.

Among the features on the evening program was a group of songs sung by the Rothenburg Sisters in their sweet mannered way. Their selections delighted those present.

Mr. and Mrs. Plyme were presented with a lovely electric radio lamp. The cottage was prettily decorated in Halloween colors. Everyone present reported a most delightful time.

There's lots of room in the FORD V-8

EVERY ONE who steps into the Ford V-8 for the first time is surprised at its roominess. There's exceptional seat room, leg room and head room in all body types — the whole car gives you a feeling of substantial size.

The Ford gives you extra body room because of the compact design of the V-8 engine — an exclusive Ford feature at a low price. This V-8 engine takes up less space in the hood and permits more of the car's length to be used for passenger comfort. Many a car selling at a higher price does not give you as much interior room as the Ford V-8.

Rear seats are wide and restful . . . three people can ride comfortably in the front seat of the Fordor Sedan, Fordor Touring Sedan, Convertible Sedan and Phaeton, and in the Coupes and Roadster. The seat of the Ford V-8 Roadster is 52 inches wide. A ride in the Ford V-8 will show that it combines unusual body room with fine-car performance, safety and comfort.

AMERICAN BOY MAGAZINE IS LOADED WITH ADVENTURE

"We try to make a subscription to THE AMERICAN BOY," states Griffith Ogden Ellis, editor, "a 'round-trip ticket to a world-wide adventure cruise."

"Most boys cannot afford the luxury of travel but they can afford to settle down under a reading lamp and take an imaginative trip to foreign lands in American Boy stories."

American Boy stories, during the coming year, will take readers to the atolls of the South Seas in a trading schooner, to the polar wastes behind a dog team, into the Canadian wilderness with the Mounted Police, through the Caribbean with the U. S. Navy, even to the far-away planet of Mars in a space ship!

There'll be true adventures among the lions and chimpanzees of Africa with Captain Carl von Hoffman, famous explorer and ethnologist. In addition there'll be stories about the favorite characters of a million boys—Bonehead Jim Tierney, detective; Square Jaw Davis, engineer; Hile-rack, the red-and-gold collie; Connie Morgan, and Douglas Renfrew.

There'll be vocational stories that will help the reader select his life work, advice on hobbies, sports tips from famous coaches and players, money-earning suggestions, vacation hints, and worthwhile contests.

THE AMERICAN BOY costs only $1 a year, or $2 for three years, foreign subscriptions 50 cents a year extra. Send your name, address, and remittance to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Mich. Service will start with the issue you specify. On newsstands, 10c a copy.

125,000 PEOPLE IN THE CHICAGO AREA ARE LIVING BETTER BECAUSE OF GAS HEAT

A job nobody wants

but Gas Heat will take it!

If this advertisement appeared in the paper you read daily, what would you say? Ridiculous! Nonsense! Absurd! But just think a moment.

You wouldn't want the job at that salary. Nor would anyone you know. Drudgery, back-breaking toil. Long hours, night work, no days off. And only a few cents a day for your trouble. Such an advertisement may appear ridiculous. Nevertheless, it's the job you actually hold right now, if you're still putting up with old-fashioned methods of heating.

Make up your mind to be rid of all furnace worries and work. For a few cents more a day, your family could be enjoying all the freedom and luxury of modern gas heat. Gas heat, of course, takes care of itself. It is clean and absolutely automatic. Once you have it installed, you're free from shoveling coal, tending the furnace and cleaning out furnace dirt. Gas heat gives you welcome hours of extra leisure. More time to play with the children, more time for the things you've always wanted to do. More time for sleep in the mornings, too. No icy trips to the basement. The furnace starts up in the morning automatically.

Let us show you how reasonably your family may enjoy gas heat. Its many advantages cost only a few cents more a day. Investigate now. Call your nearest Public Service office and ask for free estimate.

"We like gas heat mostly for its cleaner qualities than other forms of fuel. Our house temperature is also kept more uniform than it formerly was possible."

The Heavy Burden of Bureaucracy

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

"... has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people and eat out their substance."

Is that protest familiar to you? It should be. You've read it in the Declaration of Independence, among the array of grievances that drove the American colonies to the desperate lengths of the Revolution.

Thomas Jefferson, who wrote the famous document, and George Washington, who gave it reality, called that sort of thing Tyranny. Today it bears a softer name. We call it Bureaucracy. And we suffer it to a degree that would probably have aroused the colonists to a white heat of indignation.

For Bureaucracy is the enemy of that democracy for which the colonists fought. It is built up of bureaus, commissions, and boards that usurp the power which, under the Constitution, is vested in the people. It is growing in scope and in influence. It has become one of the heaviest loads on the back of the American worker and earner. Why?

Because Bureaucracy has increased the horde of minor officials and federal jobholders who now ferret into our personal affairs and consume so large a share of our taxes.

Because it is Bureaucracy that functions in the scores of alphabetic commissions which usurp Congressional and other authority and add so greatly to the complexities and burdens of government.

Because it is Bureaucracy that tries to tell you how many potatoes you can raise, and for what you must sell them.

Because it is Bureaucracy that boosts the cost of living—by loading on you not only the expense of its great army of jobholders, but also the waste involved in experimental juggling of prices and production and basic principles of government.

Remember, under our Constitution, the American people never agreed to surrender such powers to appointed officials in whose selection they had no voice. They retained that authority for themselves and their elected public servants.

Bureaucracy, therefore, represents an invasion of the people's rights—a departure from the form of government under which America achieved a growth in area, in population and in resources unrivaled among nations. That's why Bureaucracy remains the foe not only of democracy, but of every citizen who retains the American spirit of self-reliant patriotism.

Bricks Used by Aviators

In the early days of the World war French aviators carried as part of their equipment a bag of bricks. They were carried in the hope that a pilot might be able to hurl a brick into the propeller of the enemy's airplane. Two German machines were thus brought down.

Foods for Hallowe'en

SPOOKY foods are the specialty of Hallowe'en festivities—foods that suggest hobgoblins, Jack-o'-lanterns, witches and black cats. So, without more ado, we're going to give you some recipes for spooky foods to serve on that spectral night.

An Entree and Sandwich

Red Devil on Toast: Add two cups grated cheese to the contents of a can of tomato soup, and heat until melted. Add the contents of a No. 2 can of peas and half of a No. 2 can (one cup) of red kidney beans, salt and pepper, and heat thoroughly. Serve on toast and lay eight crisp curls of bacon on top. Serves eight.

Jack-O'-Lantern Sandwiches: Cut Boston brown bread in circles, and on half of them cut Jack-o'-lantern faces with a sharp knife. Butter the other slices. Mix together one cream cheese, one-half cup chopped canned pimiento, and one-half cup chopped salted almonds, and add enough mayonnaise to make the mixture spread easily. Spread on the plain slices, cover with the faces, and stuff the eyes, nose and mouth with more pimiento.

An Appropriate Ice

Black Cat Ice: Boil two-thirds cup sugar and one and one-eighth cups syrup from canned pineapple about three minutes, and cool. Add three cups cider, and freeze. Serves eight. Serve topped with a black cat cut out of stiff paper and pasted onto a toothpick.*

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Through more years than most of us can remember, the U. S. senate has been the object of caustic criticism, jibe and jest because of its rule permitting unlimited debates. Time after time long senate speeches have been the object of editorial attack in one segment or another of American metropolitan newspapers. Its slow, tortoise-like methods have been held up to ridicule in spoken and written word innumerable times, and its procedure remains unchanged.

It was no occasion for surprise, therefore, when a new outburst of criticism of senate rules of procedure was launched upon us immediately after the last session of congress adjourned. Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana, the self-styled kingfish, broke loose as he has so many times broken loose and effectively tied senate plans in a knot. He did the very thing that has precipitated criticism of the senate through all of the years mentioned above and succeeded in a one-man filibuster in blocking passage of an appropriation bill. Indeed, he was so effective in his job that he brought down on his head the wrath of President Roosevelt and all of the New Dealers who were about to realize culmination of some of their most cherished dreams.

While the Long filibuster probably should be criticized because undoubtedly there was some unfairness about it, the reason it takes on more importance at this time is because it placed so many of the New Dealers in a state of high dudgeon mentally and because it again centered attention upon these same senate rules.

By way of preliminary explanation, I believe it ought to be said that no organized body can operate effectively or orderly without first binding itself to adhere to rules of procedure that will give each an opportunity. These rules, in the case of the senate, are very old. It may be said they are antiquated and obsolete; surely some will take that view of them. But nevertheless those are the rules and the senate has been able for a good many years to produce satisfactory legislative results under them.

I do not propose here to say that they should be revised or that the present rules should be retained. But I do believe that before changes are made and before those who propose changes spread too much ballyhoo, the country should understand some of the reasons which actuate the present urge.

The kingfish spoke for nearly six hours on the closing night of the session. He could not be prevented from speaking after he was once recognized by the presiding officer. He told the senate he was battling for a government loan rate on cotton of 12 cents per pound whereas the administration was proposing to make the rate either nine or ten cents per pound. The senate had placed an amendment on an appropriation bill to carry out the idea of twelve cents a pound and had put up the proposition to the house of representatives which showed no signs of agreeing at all until Mr. Roosevelt took a hand and suggested the compromise of ten cents a pound. All that remained was a formal vote of the senate to put the administration plan into effect. Senator Long decided it should not be and he proceeded to lick the administration single-handedly by continuing his filibuster until the midnight hour when the congress was to adjourn finally.

In blocking the administration compromise, Senator Long also defeated appropriation of something like $100,000,000 which the administration was going to use in setting up machinery under its so-called security laws, the Guffey bill for regulation of the soft coal industry and the bond created theoretically to settle labor disputes. All of these bills were pressed hard by the administration, if one had not had its antagonists in congress. They were and are strictly New Deal measures. As a result of the Long filibuster none of them can be made fully operative until congress convenes again next January and appropriates the money. So, it can be seen how the pride of the New Deal professors was wounded. It can be seen likewise why they, along with the President, did so much squawking about the Long filibuster. Senator Long was an ideal goat for the situation.

It is not my privilege nor is it within my power to say whether the legislation which Senator Long virtually nullified is so important that five months of delay is the difference between life and death in this country. Indeed, I cannot see any reason for all of the haste that is exemplified by the shouts and the criticisms suddenly brought forth because of that filibuster. The bills which were brought to final passage only a few days before adjournment had been languishing in congress since last January.

Unnecessary Barking

The President had repeatedly urged their enactment but the congress was fit to delay. Consequently in various quarters in Washington I heard the inquiry as to why so much damage can be done by delays of five months when there had been delays of seven months preceding enactment of the measures. Some of the more vitriolic among the New Deal critics even went so far as to inquire why all of the hullabaloo over a delay of five months when Mr. Roosevelt made no effort to obtain enactment of the social security bill—the keystone of the New Deal—in the first session of congress under his control. Without knowing all of the answers, it does appear to me that there is quite a bit of unnecessary barking going on about this one incident.

So, without defending a filibuster in any wise, it occurs to me that we ought to look back into history and see the benefits accruing from unlimited debate in the senate, a procedure which the New Dealers now want to change. Through all of the years that congress has existed the senate has moved in a deliberative way. It has been slow, to be sure; yet, records of the past make it appear that this slow procedure has resulted inevitably in better legislation. Many are the schemes that surged forward on the ballyhoo of a minority to passage in the house of representatives only to be blocked and properly examined in the senate. Many are the times as well when the deliberative character of senate debate gave time for expression of a majority sentiment in the country and saved it from being precipitated into policies of national legislation that would have worked untold harm. I cannot but believe that the privilege of unlimited debate in the senate has more good features than bad.

Time after time in years past, demands have been made for liberalization of rules in the house of representatives so that individual members might voice their views at length. The house never has yielded from the position it has taken that its numbers were too great to permit free-for-all discussion such as takes place in the senate. The house does its work in committees and those committees are generally under the guidance of the political party in control of the government. The house, therefore, invariably votes the will of the administration. In consequence of this, it is hard to believe that the senate ought to bind and gag its members and prevent their free expression. If there is a minority, that minority ought to be heard. The senate is the forum. As a personal expression, I do not see where any good at all can come from the proposed restrictions for senate debate and I do not believe it will eventually.

Bond Issue Failure

For the first time since the Civil war, a federal government bond issue failed the other day to attract enough subscribers to absorb the offering. It was a small offering at that. The amount was only $100,000,000. The bonds were not, strictly speaking, United States government bonds. They were being issued by the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation but they bore the guarantee of the United States treasury that they would be paid both as to interest and principal and to all intents and purposes may not be distinguished from government bonds.

When the treasury received offers of only $85,500,000, Secretary Morgenthau was both surprised and chagrined. He laid the failure of the issue to the fact that the bonds were to carry only 1 1/2 per cent interest, a very low rate. It was a part of the treasury policy to sell government securities at interest rates as low as possible to reduce the burden of the interest charge which the government must carry on its gigantic public debt. Nevertheless, "it ain't so good."

The national debt now outstanding is something like $30,000,000,000. It is approximately $9,000,000,000 higher than when Mr. Roosevelt took office. It is due to go still higher because additional money must be borrowed to carry out the works-relief plans of the New Deal. Some authorities predict that before Mr. Roosevelt's present term expires as President, the public debt will aggregate something like $35,000,000,000, the highest in all history for our nation.

Long experience as a student of financial affairs prompts my conclusion that failure of the $100,000,000 issue to be fully subscribed does not mean that government bonds are a bad investment. I am inclined to the opinion that the treasury tried to drive down the interest rate too low and that most investors figured they could obtain a better return than that which Mr. Morgenthau offered them. But, after all, there is something of a warning in this circumstance. I believe the warning is that if the Roosevelt administration continues to spend and spend and borrow and borrow, it must pay higher and higher interest rates for the money it borrows. Again, that "ain't so good."

THE MOUNTAIN OF GOLD

PERHAPS a mountain of gold appears like one of those marvels which could never exist outside of fairy stories, but two men actually found such a place.

The Fisk expedition to the West came from Minnesota in the early '60's. Leading the wagon train were Captain J. L. Fisk and Dr. W. D. Dibb. Near Fort Rice, on a branch of the Yellowstone river, the train made camp. They were approaching dangerous country, and it was felt that a reconnoitre would be wise. So, while the wagons waited, Captain Fisk and Doctor Dibb rode out alone to see what lay ahead.

They went to the southwest. After some time on the way, they came to a deep and gloomy canyon, and in the rocks around them could be seen traces of gold. This was interesting, so they kept on. The farther they rode, the more gold appeared. At last the horses became tired, and since a small cave was near at hand they put the animals in this shelter to rest, out of sight of Indians who might be about.

After they had walked two miles, they saw so much gold in the rocks that they could hardly believe their eyes. To get a better idea of this golden country they climbed some 500 feet up a mountain side, and here the sunlight caught the gold until the whole place seemed bathed in an auriferous light. The pure metal could be pulled out of the rocks with their fingers!

Realizing that this was the ideal end for any journey, no matter where it might be headed, they staked claims—claims for themselves, claims for relatives and friends, and claims for every man on the wagon train—as fast as they could. Dark came while they were still staking off the glorious golden mountainside. Why go back now, only to return at daybreak? They decided to stay where they were, and to enjoy the unique experience of sleeping—if they could sleep—on almost solid gold.

But during the night an experience of another kind caused them to change their minds. Indians had seen them—Indians who perhaps felt a prior claim to the mountain of gold, and who did not propose to have that claim jumped.

Fortunately for the white men, there were not many in the attacking party, but they realized that they must retreat immediately. Sliding and stumbling, unable to see their footing, never knowing when death would reach them, the two men managed to reach the cave where the horses were.

It was too dangerous for them to remain in the canyon, for daylight would come shortly. Somehow they made their way out of the place, running and fighting, desperately aware that their lives hung on very slender threads indeed. But by some marvelous providence, they escaped and rode to the wagon encampment—only to find it, too, besieged, and by a larger band of Indians!

One can imagine Captain Fisk's depression. He had left the party for which he was responsible, and here he was, returning, perhaps, too late. He and Dr. Dibb entered the fight, and managed to rejoin the party, but most of the gold with which they had filled their pockets was lost.

For two weeks the unfortunate wagon train stood off the Indians. Each day the white men grew more apprehensive and their attackers bolder. At last one man, feeling that he would as soon die outside as inside the camp, fled for help, and got to Fort Rice in safety. Soldiers immediately rode to the rescue, and the bedraggled "expedition" returned to Fort Rice with them.

And now came the greatest disappointment of all. Orders had been given that the train should proceed no farther. The Indians were rising, and to venture deeper into their territory would be foolhardy. Captain Fisk had all a soldier's respect for orders, and he knew that he must obey. But before they started back for "the states," he tried to find out something about the mountain of gold. There was little to tell. Other men had ventured part of the way into those gloomy mountains, but some had been killed, and all efforts to see what lay in the canyons had been abandoned.

Perhaps it was this same wonderful mountain that Father Jean Pierre De Smet saw. Just where this was, the good old man would never say, for he feared that white miners filled with the peculiar madness engendered by the chase of the golden phantom would drive off or kill the Indians of the region—and Father De Smet loved humanity more than gold. However, we need not doubt that he saw it, for the priest himself told it in St. Louis. "I know," he said, "where gold exists in the Rocky mountains in such abundance that, if made known, it would astonish the world." But he would tell no more, except that he himself had seen the location, had told his Indian guides of its value and that if white men heard of it they would pour into the country and deface it. While Father De Smet often described the beauties of the land he loved so well, he never revealed anything that might yield a clue to gold.

DIFFERENT AMOUNTS OF LIGHT NEEDED

A survey shows that 22 per cent of children finishing grade school have damaged eye sight. When they have finished college, 40 per cent are so affected. At age forty, 65 per cent suffer from visual defects. And at age sixty, 95 per cent have eye defects.

This regrettable increase in eye troubles is in many instances caused by eye strain resulting from reading, studying, sewing at night with poor light and not enough light.

Science measures light in terms of foot-candles. A foot-candle is the amount of light one standard candle shines on a surface one foot away.

For seeing one's way around and performing ordinary tasks which do not require seeing very small objects, 5 foot-candles is sufficient. For reading coarse print and large stitch sewing, you can get along with 10 foot-candles. For continued reading of ordinary print, or doing ordinary sewing, you need at least 20 foot-candles. For reading fine print and fine sewing, you require 30 foot-candles, or more.

Your light may look bright, but it is the illumination you get on your work that saves your eyes from strain; and this diminishes rapidly the farther away you are from your lamp.

Seated with your paper or work 3 feet away from your lamp, it will require a light of at least 275 candlepower to produce the 30 foot-candles needed to be certain your eyes have enough light to do their work without danger of strain and permanent injury.

If you use electricity, your light company will recommend the right size bulbs to use.

If your home is not wired, one of the new 300 candlepower kerosene or gasoline pressure mantle lamps will supply plenty of "live" natural light for every home need. It takes the pressure to give you all the light you should have.

JELLIED APPLESAUCE SALAD

To make this you need two and one-half cups hot unsweetened applesauce, three tablespoons small red cinnamon candies, one tablespoonful granulated gelatin, one-quarter cup cold water, two tablespoonfuls lemon juice, one eighth teaspoonful nutmeg, and lettuce.

Combine the hot applesauce, cinnamon candies, and the gelatin, which has been added to the cold water, and stir until the candies and gelatin are dissolved. Add the lemon juice and nutmeg, and pour into six individual molds. Chill until set; unmold on lettuce; serve with mayonnaise. This will serve six. To serve two or three, make half this recipe.—Good Housekeeping Institute.

THREE PATENTED CONSTRUCTION FEATURES MADE THIS NEW GROUND GRIP TIRE POSSIBLE

THE new Firestone Ground Grip Tire is the greatest traction tire ever built. It has 54% more tread rubber to give your car, truck, tractor and farm implements the greatest traction ever known.

Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process which soaks every cord in liquid rubber, makes it possible for this tire to stand the terrific strains and stresses of the extra pulling power. Firestone Tires are the only tires built that are Gum-Dipped.

The tread is built of extra tough rubber and designed with deep grooves between scientifically placed cross bars, giving super-traction and long wear. Firestone Ground Grip Tires are self-cleaning. (Chains are not needed.) The bars of the rubber are so placed that they will not bump on paved roads, giving you easier riding and longer wear.

Rations for Fighters

During the World war the German soldiers were supplied with tea and coffee without milk. Small rations of rum and arack were furnished to troops in field and camp. These rations were given out in the evening to be mixed with the tea. Fifteen to twenty men received one bottle. In times of great physical exertion, the allowance of sugar was increased.

POLYGAMY IN ARIZONA

Short Creek, Arizona — Relief workers did not reach Short Creek until last spring. SERA investigator, Howard Roark hurried back to Kingman, the county seat, and County Attorney E. E. Bollinger with the news that Short Creek citizens practiced polygamy. Deputies swooped down and arrested three of the polygamist Sanhedrin cult that had seceded from the Mormons. Almost half Arizona seemed to be present at the trial. Judge Lauritzen founder of the 25-year-old village, disappointed them by dismissing the case. Bollinger raged at this "blot on the history of Arizona justice," while Deputy Miller Black explained why he hadn't arrested 3 "harem wives." "It's easier to hogtie a good old shooting desperado than some of these wild mares."

MAN'S MOST PRODUCTIVE YEAR

Athens, Ohio—In 1930 Dr. Harvey C. Lehman, psychology professor at Ohio university started five years of research to determine the most productive period in a man's life. He studied the lives of 1,264 famous chemists, physicians, novelists, poets, inventors, mathematicians and astronomers and their 4,897 major contributions to human knowledge. His conclusion: that the average man is most productive in his 35th year.

BLUE EAGLE'S BURIAL

Washington, D. C.—Without ceremony, the most talked-of bird of the 20th century was quietly interred.
Administrative Order X141 from the Washington headquarters of the NRA read: "Determination has been made . . . that further production of any Blue Eagle insignia or emblem would be contrary to the policy of the National Recovery Administration. Accordingly all reproduction authorizations heretofore issued . .
are hereby cancelled." The Eagle was 2 years, 1 month and 11 days old.

FLOYD GIBBONS
IN THIS NEWSPAPER

The fast-talking ace of war correspondents and headline hunters is in a class by himself when it comes to finding adventure and telling about it in a stirring and entertaining manner.

You have heard FLOYD GIBBONS over the radio. Now read his thrilling tales in your own home newspaper

The tales you will read are true stories of adventure in every-day life . . . stories of adventure that has come to people just like yourselves, in towns just like the one in which you live.

Gibbons has challenged the fiction writers of the world to invent more thrilling adventures than those which happen every day in the ordinary lives of men, women and children.

The stories with which he is backing up this challenge are to appear in this paper.

A New World
Hangs in Balance

A new world hangs in the balance!

For, whatever course the League of Nations takes in its conference today respecting Italy's Ethiopian campaign, the problem still remains the same. "Italy must expand or explode. Germany must find markets for its manufactures and new lands for its peoples. The world must recognize Japan's crying need for additional territories and raw material sources. These three nations must find their places in the sun."

Thus is the crisis analyzed in this week's Liberty Magazine by Col. E.
M. House, wartime advisor to President Wilson. "If England institutes sanctions against Italy, Mussolini will involve the British in a war.
For Il Duce must have an outlet for his imperial urge."
"Every statesman will admit in private conversation that Italy needs new sources of raw materials and a place to send its excess population," says House, "just as they will agree that Germany, should have her pre-war colonies returned and Japan should be given a free rein in Asia."

Col. House believes drastic territorial changes are necessary if peace among the great powers is to be maintained. "A peaceful adjustment is possible," he avers, "But as yet there seems little inclination on the part of England, France, the United States or Russia to cede some of their possessions to any of these countries."

He warns against antagonizing the Japanese and points out that the yellow races might eventually coalesce and form a block that will menace the white races. "Hitler would be kept busy for a few years if Germany's colonies were returned," Col. House states, "while Italy should not be molested in its Ethiopian campaign. Frustration in that quarter will lead to an outbreak in Europe."
